SurveyLA: Arts District

SurveyLA - the Los Angeles Historic Resources Survey - is Los Angeles' first-ever comprehensive program to identify significant historic resources throughout our city. The primary goals of SurveyLA are to identify and document significant properties. The field surveys cover the entire City of Los Angeles -- over 880,000 legal parcels within almost 500 square miles. SurveyLA is partially funded by a $2.5 million grant from the J. Paul Getty Trust. Additionally, the Getty Conservation Institute is providing significant technical and advisory support to the project. The project is managed by the Department of City Planning's Office of Historic Resources (OHR). Join us to hear from City Planning about the survey results in the Arts District.

Special Guest: Ken Bernstein, City Planning

DTLA Community Plan Update

The City Planning Department has recently embarked upon the DTLA 2040 project - an update and merging of Downtown's two Community Plans following the "form-based code" direction of re:code LA. Starting on Monday, October 3rd and running through Saturday, October 8th, City Planning will be hosting an open studio and design charrette at the historic Bradbury Building to gather stakeholder input on the plan. CCA members are invited to a special preview of the plan update.

Special Guests: Bryan Eck, City Planning
